The President’s Residence overlooks the Iowa River, and its architecture was inspired by ancient Greek and Roman cultures.

Currier Residence Hall was constructed in 1914 to address the housing shortage for females on the UI campus. Additions were added in 1927, 1939, and 1949 to give Currier a U-shaped layout.

North Hall formerly housed the University of Iowa High School, and now it houses the UI School of Social Work. A mysterious pair of doubled Xs can be seen on the east side of the building.

Since 1972, Hancher Auditorium has been the cultural hub of the UI campus and home to world-class dance, music, and theater. The curves and flow of the building represent the Iowa River.

The Levitt Center houses the UI Center for Advancement which engages alumni, fans, etc. in events and opportunities to give back to the university. The glass-walled rotunda seen in this building’s design has been described as a lantern for visitors.

Bonus Code Question:

What is the name of the style used to describe the President’s Residence?

Submit the answer in Employee Self-Service > My LiveWELL Portal for 150 liveWELL points!